Pension giant CalSTRS goes after oil giant Exxon, knocking the company's red ink and carbon capture plan. The pension program is pushing for four new green-friendly independent directors on Exxon's board. See my CIO story:

Reenergize XOM

"[Exxon] has remained committed to a future of expanding oil and gas production and was the last of the major multinational oil companies to adopt corporate-wide emissions reduction targets, announcing the pledge only in December. And while the company's finances have crumbled in recent years, it remains by some metrics the largest of the Western investor-owned oil companies." - Nicholas Kusnetz via InsideClimate News

Reenergize XOM

For years ExxonMobil has pursued spending & strategic plans that position it to succeed only in the absence of a material long-term energy demand shift, & it remains positioned for continued value destruction for decades to come under alternate scenarios.

ExxonMobil shareholders deserve a Board that works proactively to create long-term value, not defensively in the face of deteriorating returns and the threat of losing their seats.
